The integrated solutions will also assist the wellness franchise continue expanding its footprint with new locations opening next year.

Shane Madden, CEO of Hydreight commented, “As we continue to grow and evolve our platform, we’ve recognized that there are additional white label opportunities to utilize and tap into our platform and network. Post Covid, as rules and regulations have tightened, it has become increasingly hard for brick-and-mortar wellness spas to provide some services without a medical professional or telemedicine technology to see a doctor. Our white label division has quickly become another revenue bucket that we will continue to focus on growing and our team continues to review these opportunities and onboard new businesses.”

To grow the division, the Company plans to build a sales team to direct sell to these businesses and will continue focusing on increasing and adding more partners using its white label technology.
